Reading and True and False

What kinds of health insurance does the government provide in Minnesota?<sup>1,2,3</sup>

Medical Assistance (MA), Minnesota's Medicaid program, pays for medical care for very low-income Minnesotans.

- People enrolled in MA include children, parents, pregnant women, adults without children, seniors and people with disabilities.
- There are eligibility requirements for the program. People must have an annual income lower than a certain level.
- Even if their income is above the limit, people may still qualify for MA if they have enough medical bills.
- Federal and state money pays for MA.

MinnesotaCare is a program for Minnesotans who have low incomes, are not eligible for MA, and cannot get affordable health insurance through their employer.

- The program is mainly for adults. Children who are not eligible for MA may be able to get MinnesotaCare.
- There are eligibility requirements for the program. For example, people must have an annual income below a certain level.
- Most people who have MinnesotaCare pay a monthly premium. The cost depends on your family size and income.
- MinnesotaCare is paid for with state and federal tax dollars, taxes on healthcare providers, and the premiums paid by people who are enrolled.

Medicare is a federal health insurance program for people over 65 and people with certain disabilities.

People who work in the U.S. pay a small part of each paycheck to Medicare. If you have paid this Medicare tax during your working years, you will pay less for Medicare when you are older.

If you have not worked in the U.S. and have not paid anything to Medicare, you will need to pay more to get Medicare insurance when you are older.

Minnesota has a Medicare savings program to help people with low income pay for Medicare.

Reading Comprehension

What is a health care system?

A health care system organizes people and resources to provide medical care to a community or population. Different countries have different health care systems.

- Countries such as Canada, England and Taiwan have a national health care system. This means health care is run only by the government and almost all health care information comes from one government organization.
- In the United States, health care is a collaboration of private companies and government (public) institutions. Insurance and health care can be complicated and difficult to understand.

Under the US system, health care is managed through many different organizations that are not connected to one another. This is why you may have to fill out information forms again if you go to a new clinic or hospital. This can also make health care very confusing.

What is health insurance?

Insurance is something you buy so that if you get sick, you will not have to pay all of the medical bills by yourself. Having health insurance allows a sick or injured person to have her insurance company pay for part of the medical services. Without health insurance, a person must pay for all his medical care by himself, which can cost a lot of money.

Health insurance also supports preventive health care. Often, the health insurance company will pay for yearly check-ups, to help prevent individuals from becoming very sick.

How does health insurance work?

Health insurance is like a shared jar of money for medical expenses. Everyone puts money into the jar. Some people may get sick and need to use this jar of money more than other people. Other people may not get sick and may not need to use the money. If everyone puts money in the jar, then there is enough for everyone to have money when they get sick.

How can I get health insurance?

- Employed: Many people receive health insurance through their workplace.
- Employed but uninsured: Individuals whose jobs do not offer insurance can purchase private insurance.
- Unemployed, disabled or low-income: Individuals may be able to get insurance through a program funded by the state and/or the federal government, such as Medical Assistance or MinnesotaCare.
- Age 65+: Senior citizens who have lived and worked in the U.S. for a certain amount of time qualify for Medicare, health insurance for senior citizens provided by the federal government.

Conversation

Mario was just hired at a technology business. He is meeting with the Human Resources Director to talk about health insurance. She is explaining the different health benefit options to Mario.

HR: Hello, Mario. Welcome to Tech Solutions. I would like to review your health benefits with you.

Mario: That's great, because it can be really confusing.

HR: Yes, it can. Your coverage is with a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO). Most medical services, such as the lab, x-ray, and pharmacy, are located within the same site.

Mario: Okay, that seems convenient. What are the other advantages of this type of system?

HR: Well, HMOs think preventive care is important, so those types of services are almost always covered. They have low monthly premiums and low co-pays. You'll probably have a primary health care provider who coordinates your care.

Mario: That all sounds good. Are there any disadvantages to this type of system?

HR: Your primary health care provider must be within the HMO network, because providers out of the network aren't covered or have limited coverage. You must get a referral from your primary provider to see a specialist. Not all medical services are covered.

Mario: I see. Well, thank you for explaining all of that.

HR: You're welcome! Here are some informational materials for you to take home. Read them carefully. If you have any further questions, please let me know!
